

How to Transfer Your Credit

Put your UConn credit to work, you earned it.

Save syllabi. Colleges and universities might request a copy of a student's course syllabus to assure that the course was comparable to the one taught on their campus.

Search the public credit transfer database found on the UConn ECE website. We have mined the policies of hundreds of universities and colleges.

Contact colleges and universities directly. Students who already know the institutions they plan to apply to should contact them directly to see where transcripts should be sent and what universities transfer credit is accepted from.

Wait until your course is completed to request your transcript. One of the most valuable pieces of a transcript is the grade. Make sure grades have been posted before requesting a transcript be sent to another institution.

Request a UConn transcript. Students are responsible for requesting their transcript from the University of Connecticut be sent to a different institution. UConn ECE recommends requesting an additional transcript for the student's records.

Speak to a college advisor. If a student's credit was not automatically transferred when a transcript was provided, do not give up. Students should speak to their academic advisors to see if there is any more information that needs to be provided in order to have the credit recognized.

Students must receive a grade of C or above in any UConn ECE course to receive course credit. Any grade below a C will automatically appear as an audit on a student transcript. Students do not receive credit for audited courses.

Credits transfer at about 87% of the time

While the University of Connecticut cannot guarantee course recognition on behalf of another university, it strives to make the transfer of credits from one institution to another as simple as possible. The majority of students who have taken University of Connecticut courses through UConn Early College Experience have successfully transferred their UConn credits to the college or university of their choice.